

The Cross-Town Horse Cars.

THE MORRIS PLACE LADIES CELEBRATE THE COMPLETION OF THE LINE.

Saturday morning last was the eventful day when the Cross-Town horse-cars should run to Morris Place.

Mr. Eppley had kindly placed at the disposal of the ladies the first cars that should run the whole route, they in turn inviting the officials of the road, Mr. Pierson, Mr. Eppley and Mr. Marsh, with their families, to return with them from Orange to partake of a collation on the lawn of Miss Frank and Mr. Joseph Morris, who kindly threw open their house and grounds for the occasion.

By three o'clock in the afternoon those invited began to assemble. About fifty ladies and children congregated at the terminus of the route. When the time came for the horse-cars to make their appearance there was eager expectation. When they did come, such a time! The ladies just felt like hurrahing, but did not. There were three cars—the large car drawn by six horses, handled most beautifully by Mr. Waller, the Superintendent of the road. Mr. Eppley, with smiling face, was welcomed by all. After greetings and introductions, the ladies and children boarded the cars. The elderly ladies, Mrs. Engeline Hull, Mrs. Thomas and some others, expressing the opinion that they never expected to live to see the day when they should ride in the horse-cars from Morris Place. All were in the merriest mood possible. As they passed different places and people, handkerchiefs and even shawls were waved. Flags were displayed and waved along the route. The cars went gaily on—everybody was happy—when lo! a sudden stop. The large car was off the track and one of the horses down. But everything was righted soon and all went merrily on their way, reaching the office of the Company in due season, where all alighted from the cars. There we found waiting for us Mr. Pierson and Mr. Marsh with their families and Mrs. Eppley. After introductions all around, we proceeded to return.

We reached Bay Avenue about six o'clock, meeting the gentlemen of the party at the terminus of our ride. Soon the ladies were loaded down with the good things on Miss Morris' lawn. About one hundred and twenty-five sat down to supper; twenty-two families being represented, the young ladies of the party acting as waiters. They did their duty faithfully, but yet the goodies did not seem to diminish, Mr. Pierson fearing at last that our Bloomfield physicians would have to be called if we expected them to eat all that was brought on the tables. Then came the speeches. Mr. A. T. Morris after making a short speech, called on Mr. W. A. Baldwin to make an address. He arose and touched on the subject of the agitation of the horse-car question a few months ago, and of our being now in such happy relations with Orange. He said it really seemed like a wedding, and someone remarked, "this is the wedding supper." After expressing the good feelings of the Bloomfield people and thanking Mr. Eppley for his carefulness and constant supervision in building the road and giving us such a fine service, he called on that gentleman. Calls for Mr. Eppley were heard on all sides, and he arose, thanked Mr. Baldwin for his kind words and said that not he alone was deserving of all the thanks, that Mr. Pierson was the one to thank. He also thanked the ladies very heartily for the good time they had enjoyed that afternoon. After Mr. Eppley sat down calls for Mr. Pierson echoed from one side of the lawn to the other. That gentleman arose and said that Mr. Eppley had carried the enterprise through and brought the road to its happy terminus. He also expressed the thanks of the party to the ladies of Bloomfield for their generous entertainment.

Mr. Thomas Oakes was then called on and spoke briefly. Mr. Eppley said he thought the ladies ought to be heard, and calling upon Mrs. Madison, that lady responded, thanking the officials of the road for their generosity in furnishing the cars and horses for their benefit and for the pleasant time they had enjoyed during the afternoon. Mr. Marsh, Mr. Lindemeyer, and others spoke, and after chatting and talking until dusk, the Orange party started to return home singing as they started "Good-night, Ladies." The cars on reaching the Excelsior House were greeted with fireworks, Roman candles, rockets, etc., sent off by the members of the Company.

One of the youngest ladies of the party has contributed a poem inspired by the occasion, entitled:

WHAT THE ELM TREE HAS TO SAY.

BY G. M. M.

Come hither, my children, and listen well
To what the Elm Tree has to tell—The venerable Elm which stands in its might Where "The Morrisies" met on Saturday night.

There have been many changes since my young days,
And I have grown old and unused to their ways;
The only bells heard in those old times
Were the bells of the cattle at evening chimes;

The sounds that greeted my wakening ear,
A chorus of songsters, far and near;
And the "gee" and "haw" of the farmer lad

As he slowly passed with his leathern gaid,
And on Sunday morning a different sight Greeted my eyes than there does to-night, Staid old horses with a double weight, Plodding along at their Sunday gait.

In winter the ladies with pious mien, Carried their foot-stoves to the Church on the Green.
With which their physical warmth to maintain,
While the minister looked after their spiritual frame.

All then was quiet and peaceful and still,
Save the daily hum of the saw and gristmill;

An the cheery voices of father and son, Consulting together o'er the two mills in one.

Morris Neighborhood changed as time went on;
The voices of father and son were gone—

Yes, Grandpa Morris has left his place;
And many miss his kind, ruddy face.

Many years have passed since that sad day;

His children have now become old and gray.

And many "improvements" have been made since then

By the children's children of those old men.

The gas-lamp which throws its rays o'er me,
Was placed here through their instru-mentality;

And the mud through which they used to travel
Has been replaced by stone and gravel.

And so here I have stood for many a year, Watching the changes going on near;

Watching the town growing old and wise,
And many improvements increasing its size.

One day as I chanced to glance down the road,
I saw coming up a queer-looking load.

My neighbor's leaves rustled, and said unto me:

"Look! the rails for the horse cars; look,
old elm tree!"

Sure enough! the heavy load slowly advanced,
And the leaves of my neighbor shook and danced:

"Hurrah for the horse-cars! our exile is through,"

And the clang of the rails seemed to prove his words true.

There was quiet no more for us old trees:
Such bustle and hurry one seldom sees;
But I did not mind, there's a proverb-rife Which tells us that change is the spice of life.

One noonday two workmen stopped under my shade.

Said one, as he threw down his pickaxe and spade:

"To-morrow we fell the three elms by the bridge."

(I know that my leaves fairly trembled with rage)

Those elms were my cousins—the pride of our race,
And some of the oldest trees in the place.

But we could not help it; the crash came next day;
And low in the dust the old elm trees lay.

At last the railroad was finished and done,
On the thirtieth of June the first horse-cars were run,
And Orange and Bloomfield were wedded at last.

By an iron band which held them fast.

The wedding feast was under my shade,
And all sorts of good things were there displayed,
And Orange and Bloomfield made merry and gay.

At the close of that most eventful day, I looked down upon them and wondered how long

Before I would have other themes for my song;

For changes will come, as sure as can be,
And some day you'll hear more from the Old Elm Tree.

A Question of Health.

WHAT BAKING POWDER SHALL WE USE?
This plain question comes home to every housekeeper. We all desire pure and wholesome food, and this cannot be had with the use of impure or poisonous baking powder. There can be no longer a question that all the cheaper, lower grades of baking powders contain either lime or phosphoric acid. As to the what we may be to do it so much against what have been some of our household gods, there can be no gainsaying the unanimous testimony of the official chemists.

In fact, analysis seem to find no baking powder entirely free from some one of those objectionable ingredients except the Royal, and that they report as chemically pure. We find some of the baking powders advertised as pure, to contain, under the tests of Professors Chandler, Habirshaw and others, nearly twenty per cent of lime, while others are made from alum with no cream of tartar.
This, we presume, accounts for their lack of leavening power as sometimes complained of by the cook, and for the bitter taste found in the biscuits so frequently complained of by ourselves.

But aside from the inferiority of the powders by these powders, the physicians assure us that lime and alum taken into the system in such quantities as this are injurious. Their physiological effects are indigestion, dyspepsia, or worse evils.

The question naturally arises, why do these cheap baking powder makers use these things? Alum is three cents a pound, lime still cheaper, while cream of tartar costs thirty-five or forty. The reasons for the chemical purity of the Royal Baking Powder were recently given in the New York Times in an interesting description of a new method for refining argols, or crude cream of tartar. It seems that it is only under this process that cream of tartar can be freed from the lime nature to it and rendered chemically pure; that the patents and plant for this cost the Royal Baking Powder Company about half a million dollars, and that they maintain exclusive control of the rights.

Professor McMurtre, late chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., made an examination of this process, and reported upon the results attained in the refined cream of tartar. The following extract from his report would seem to answer the question repeated at the head of this article, and which is so frequently propounded by the housekeeper:

"I have examined the cream of tartar used by the Royal Baking Powder Company in the manufacture of their baking powder, and find it to be perfectly pure and free from lime in any form. The chemical tests to which I have submitted the Royal Baking Powder prove it perfectly healthful and free from every deleterious substance. The Royal Baking Powder is purest in quality and highest in strength of any baking powder of which I have knowledge."
